HACKNEY Archives staff want to hear from anyone who had their photograph taken by Gibson's studio, in Lower Clapton Road, between 1952 and 1978. The Archives, in Dalston, stocks over 155,000 negatives taken by Ron Gibson's studio featuring weddings, parties, studio portraits and local businesses. Many photographs – including the Bar mitzvah pictured, taken in December 1977 – feature unknown people and locations, and the Archives staff would love to hear from anyone who recognises them. Hackney Archives hopes to interview people who appear in the photographs, so that their stories can be preserved for the future, as part of the history of the borough. See page 21.

YOU'RE HIRED...

A RECRUITMENT drive has been launched by the Council to secure new apprentices to work across its services – including in communications and culture, surveying, enforcement and business administration.

These seven posts form part of the Hackney Apprentices programme, which will see 100 apprentices working at the Council during 2018/19.

Thirty apprenticeship roles will be launched by the Council in the summer in areas including plumbing, electrical, ICT, and youth work.

Last April the Apprenticeship

Levy was introduced to ensure large employers invest in apprenticeships. The Council supports businesses and other employers in the borough to create high quality apprenticeships.

Mum-of-two Precious Kirton (pictured) has been working as a dry lining apprentice for Mace and BDL for nearly a year. She completed a two-week dry lining course funded by London Legacy Development Corporation at the National Construction College before working.

She said: "Construction work really suits me, I've found my perfect job! The training was great and gave me enough confidence in my practical skills to know I'd like to work in the sector."

La Braya Buffong is a digital marketing apprentice at the Council. Her role involves maintaining and developing the Young Hackney website.

She said: "I've learnt a lot about how to manoeuvre the digital world and I'm excited to see where I can go."

Cllr Carole Williams, Cabinet Member for Employment, Skills and Human Resources, said: "We are committed to creating more employment and training opportunities for local people and helping to ensure that they have the skills, experience and qualifications to make a success of their chosen career."

Hackney Apprentices is open to 16-24 year olds who live in the borough, have been educated in Hackney or are care leavers. All Council apprentices aged over 18 will be paid a starting salary of over £19,000 per year, which is above London Living Wage.

Apprentices will be given accredited training and support to progress into a permanent job or a higher qualification.

The deadline for applications to the current level 3 apprenticeship vacancies is 18 March.

School Britannia

THE latest images of the new secondary school and homes, set to be built as part of the Britannia Leisure Centre development, have been released.

The proposals include a brand new Council leisure centre with a cafe and toilets (also serving Shoreditch Park); a new secondary school, sixth form and early years places; and 81 Council homes for social rent and to buy through shared ownership, and another 400 for sale to help fund the project, in the absence of Government funding.

The Council will retain full control of the land and decisions made about the site, and is acting as the developer, to ensure all income generated directly benefits local people.

The school would provide a permanent home for The City Academy Shoreditch Park, which opened at a temporary site last year, and will eventually provide 900 much-needed places and a 200-place sixth form.

The school is run by the City of London Academy Trust, which has an outstanding track record in the borough, with 89 per cent of students at The City Academy Hackney achieving five or more A*-C grades at GCSE level. It is one of the top schools in the country for pupil progress.

The school specialises in music and the performing arts and will include purpose-built sports facilities and performance rooms, which will be open to the public during out-of-school hours.

If granted planning permission, work is expected to start on the school next summer.

Work on the first residential block would also begin next summer.

The proposed Council homes would be a mix of 48 homes for social rent and 33 for shared ownership.

A further 400 properties will be sold privately to fund the development, but work on this will start later.

The homes will be in buildings of four to 25 storeys, with the tallest three buildings being 16, 19 and 25 storeys. In the base of one of the towers there will be early years facilities for Shoreditch Park Primary School.

CHARITIES and public sector organisations joined the Council this month in what is hoped will be the first in a series of summits on rough sleeping in the borough.

The Hackney Rough Sleeping Summit identified areas where the Council and partner organisations could improve their response to homelessness in the borough.

The summit discussed how to prevent people from sleeping rough and ensure that those who do find themselves sleeping on the streets are supported back into secure accommodation as quickly as possible.

Opened by Cllr Rebecca Rennison, Cabinet Member for Finance and Housing Needs, participants were asked to take part in workshops on improving the outreach services for rough sleepers, helping those who aren't eligible for Government support, and understanding the needs of rough sleepers and the effect of new Government legislation.

Despite a nationwide rise in rough sleeping, the summit came alongside news that the number of people sleeping rough in Hackney has remained relatively stable over the past three years.

Figures released last month show Hackney had identified 18 rough sleepers, all of whom had already been offered support by the Council, compared with 17 in 2016 and 20 in 2015.

Delegates at the summit took part in workshops on improving the outreach services for rough sleepers

Rough sleepers in Hackney are referred to The Greenhouse, London's first multipurpose support and advice centre for single homeless people, which is run in partnership by the Council, the NHS and Thames Reach.

There, they can access medical treatment, showering facilities, toiletries, food, clothing, Wi-Fi, welfare benefits, information and assistance in finding their own accommodation, mediation services for those who want to reconnect with friends or family, financial help, links to addiction support and access to employment and training.

“The sharp rise nationwide is a worrying sign of the impact of the Government's welfare cuts”

From May, Hackney will also host a No Second Night Out hub, which will provide a safe space while people are assessed, helped to access the right services and supported to find suitable housing.

Cllr Rennison said: “While the number of people sleeping rough in Hackney has remained fairly stable, the sharp rise nationwide is a worrying sign of the impact of the Government's welfare cuts, particularly those related to housing, where housing benefit no longer covers local rents, and lack of investment in genuinely affordable housing.”

A CINEMA in Dalston, which has not been used for more than 30 years, is to reopen after £1.9 million was secured to transform it into a multi-arts centre.

The derelict Art Deco Savoy Cinema, on Stoke Newington Road, is being revamped as part of a £3 million project and is set to reopen in September as the Hackney Arts Centre (HAC).

Once complete, it will have the capacity to seat over 2,500 people, and include a programme specifically designed to engage children and young people.

Shoreditch-based Village Underground is the company behind the proposal, which will go into partnership with renowned arts charity Community Music.

The HAC aims to make its top-class performance spaces, equipment and technical support available to 400 young people each year – giving them professional experience.

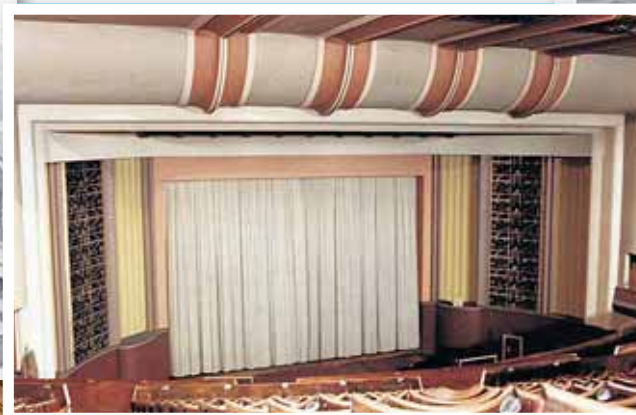

Maricia Klincke, Director of Community Music, said: “It will have a particular focus on ‘hard to reach’ children, such as those not in education.

“Over the past few years we have worked closely with the HAC team to ensure education, training and opportunities for the local community lie at its heart.

“We are excited to see these plans come to fruition this year and begin building what we hope will be a great resource for the local community.”

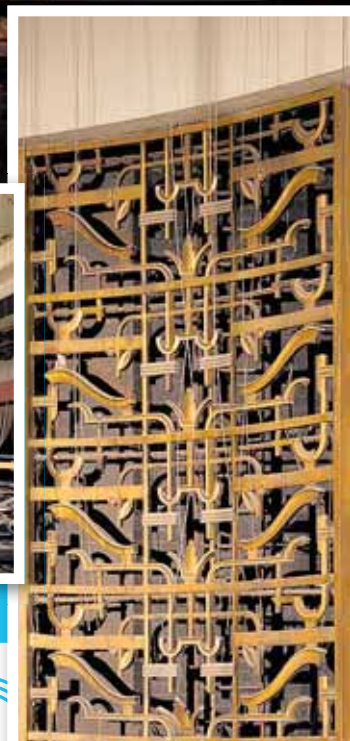

The injection of £1.9 million from social investors Big Issue Invest, The Arts Impact Fund and Triodos Bank will mean that the building will not only host film, but also lectures, debates, comedy, performance art and larger theatre and music events.

Auro Foxcroft, owner of Village Underground, said:

“As a social enterprise, it’s essential for us to have financial backing that understands our goals, and in this way these organisations have set us free to usher something into the world that would have otherwise not been possible.”

James Salmon, Investment Director at Big

Issue Invest, added: “We are particularly excited to see the development of the partnership with Community Music, a model we expect will set a fine example of how the music and arts sector can deliver social impact.”

The Savoy Cinema’s main auditorium, which has laid largely unused

“We are excited to see these plans come to fruition and begin building what we hope will be a great resource” since the mid-90s, will be renovated with many of its original Art Deco features kept intact.

Once established, HAC’s organisers aim to work with 3,500 artists every year, producing over 1,000 performances created to resonate with Hackney’s diverse communities.

MORE than 600 people attended the 13th annual Hackney Sports Awards to celebrate the sporting excellence of local schools, students, older people and coaches.

Comedian Kat B compered the night at Hackney Empire, where the borough's sporting stars were presented with awards for their achievements over the past year.

Special guests included Hackney-born Lawrence 'The Sauce' Okolie, WBA Continental Cruiserweight

Champion. A Team GB Olympic boxer in 2016, he is unbeaten in eight professional fights, which include six knock outs.

The other big name guest was England and Chelsea Professional footballer Karen Carney MBE. She was an FA Cup winner in 2012 and was bronze medallist in the World Cup in 2015. Carney has amassed more than 100 England caps since her debut for the national team in 2005.

The Sports Club of the Year Award went to Lea

Junior Rowing Club, which helps young people learn how to row from grassroots to competitive.

It is one of the best squads in the UK, and has won in prestigious competitions such as the British Junior Championships.

Coach of the Year also went to the rowing club, which was picked up by club coach Paul Carter.

Lucy Stackpool-Moore, Lea Rowing Club captain, said: "This is a fantastic achievement for the club.

Our junior rowers have gone from strength to strength supported by our brilliant coaches.

They have done our diverse club, and Hackney, proud."

Julio Burnucci-Amador, won the Under-18 Team of the Year Award alongside his Judo team mates. He said: "What you put in is what you get out.

"We worked really hard as a team and therefore collected medals. I'm really happy."

The night also highlighted the Youth Sports Fund Awards, and there was recognition of the borough's medallists at the London Youth Games.

All individual medallists over the age of 11 received a year's free Better membership to access Hackney leisure centres for their endeavours.

Award-winners at the first Hackney Play Streets Awards, which celebrates parents and young people reclaiming public spaces for the community

Playing in the street

RESIDENTS celebrated having greener and safer roads for their children at the first Hackney Play Streets Awards.

Play streets take place monthly or bi-monthly, when residents apply to shut the road for a few hours to allow children to play out more safely, and for adults to meet their neighbours. Last year there were 200 play street sessions involving 1,400 children in 40 streets and five estates in Hackney.

The Council funds Hackney Play Association, a local charity, to provide free support to residents, schools and community organisations to get involved. The awards, on 9 February, thanked the volunteers who organise the borough's play streets.

“We want to reclaim Hackney's streets from motor traffic and transform them”

Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, and Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, Transport and Parks, presented 12 awards and letters of commendation to 28 people.

Cllr Demirci, said: “We want to reclaim Hackney's streets from motor traffic and transform them.

“Hackney has been leading the way with play streets for five years, and we're taking it further by removing traffic outside primary schools at pick up and drop off times.”

Mayor Glanville added:

“It's great to see such a diverse network of residents here, celebrating their achievements and learning from each other. But it's more than just a network – it's a movement. It's about parents and young people reclaiming public spaces for the community.”

Award winners include architect Dinah Bornat, who runs a play street in Southborough Road, E9. She was recognised for her research, which shows that outdoor play in public spaces encourages cross-generational socialising.

Jackie Myers, winner of the Estate Trailblazer Award, runs a play street on the Woodberry Down estate. She says that they allow residents from the private blocks to socialise with Council tenants.

Award-winners Biblain Galloway and Beautine Wester, from the Clapton Community Seventh Day Adventist Church, claim play streets are more than just a place for children to run around. They are looking to expand their play street into a ‘street gym’ with exercise equipment and want to host a mini library and book swap.

News in brief

Hackney's allotment waiting list reopens after a decade

GROWING spinach in Stoke Newington or courgettes in Clapton may once again be possible for Hackney residents, as the waiting list for the borough's allotments is about to reopen for the first time in a decade.

Established 40 years ago, the Hackney Allotment Society (HAS) leases eight different sites from the Council, making 135 individual plots available to those with green fingers but little space at home.

Demand, however, has long outstripped supply. In 2008, the allotments waiting list was closed, since anyone joining the back of the queue would have had to expect a wait of around a decade.

Since then, the Society has steadily worked through the waiting list, awarding places to those patiently waiting so that, today, the list has shrunk to a more manageable size. For two weeks, from 1-15 March, the waiting list will once again be reopened to residents. Up to 100 people will be allowed to put their names down. Places on the list and the order of the list will be selected by a random lottery.

Ruth Gladwin, of HAS, says: “An allotment is a big commitment of time, but also a very enjoyable activity. It brings you closer to nature and wildlife by being out in the fresh air. You can be creative, productive, imaginative, energetic and also friendly with your neighbours on the allotment site.”

HAS celebrates the diversity of Hackney and welcomes applications from all ethnic and minority groups.

For more info on how to apply, and details of the allotment locations, go to Hackney's libraries or visit: www.hackneyallotments.org.uk

Help promote Fairtrade in Hackney through volunteering

THE Hackney Fairtrade Group is looking for volunteers to promote its cause within the borough as part of Fairtrade Fortnight, which starts on 26 February.

Fairtrade aims to help producers in developing countries achieve better trading conditions for their workers and promote sustainable farming.

Hackney Fairtrade has been in operation since 2007, and through its activities has successfully applied for – and renewed – Fairtrade status for the Council.

Some examples of its recent activities include promoting Fairtrade footballs and working with Hackney Wick

Football Club to achieve this; tasting events, with support from local shops, libraries and markets to encourage people to buy Fairtrade products; and visiting schools to promote fair trade.

Bucking the trend

By Harriet Worsley

WHEN Sir Alan Wood was growing up, one of 10 children on an estate in Stepney, no one expected him to end up at Buckingham Palace, picking up a knighthood for his services to children's social care and education.

In fact, "kids from where we came from didn't go to university," he says, "the idea was highly unusual."

Wood attended a "very poor" school on the Isle of Dogs before a stroke of good fortune saw him enrol in the newly opened Stepney Green School, near to where he lived.

"It was 50 yards from our estate," says Wood, "but what I really remember was the incredibly inspirational head teacher."

The teacher in question was James Taylor and he took a visionary approach to education.

"He didn't care what we were good at," explains Wood, "only that the school should discover exactly what it was and pursue it with high expectations."

Pupils received training in everything from tailoring to furniture polishing.

So when Wood grew up and was placed in charge of a body tasked with turning around Hackney's failing schools, he says: "I had little time for people who said it was the kids or the resources that were the problem. I knew it could be done."

The year was 2002. Wood had spent time as a history teacher and then as assistant director of education at Lambeth Council before making the jump to Hackney, where he became director of education.

The state of that education, however, was deemed so bad that a bespoke, not-for-profit company was created to take control of the local authority's entire education function. That body was the Learning Trust and Wood was appointed as its Chief Executive.

When he accepted the role, the borough's Key Stage 2 results were the worst in the country. Less than a third of students were achieving five GCSEs to grade C level or above. And many parents refused to send their children to secondary school in

Sir Alan Wood helped turn around the borough's academic results as Chief Executive of the Learning Trust Hackney. In fact, 40 per cent of 11 year olds opted out of the borough.

Today, Hackney boasts some of Britain's highest achieving state secondary schools, as well as almost every primary school rated 'good' or 'outstanding'.

Wood, however, is adamant that improvement should be credited to: "Every head and teacher in our schools, the support provided to them by colleagues in the Learning Trust, and the Council's determination to ensure education could succeed. My main role was to remove the barriers to their success.”

“ Lots of heads were sceptical. We had to win their confidence, we had to win parents' confidence ”

He also had a huge diplomatic mission to accomplish. Wood recalls: "Lots of heads were sceptical that, after so long and so much going wrong, we could change things. We had to win their confidence, we had to win parents' confidence."

"We had to give everyone the sense that we were in this together, because at the time, everyone was at war with each other."

Over 10 years, all secondary schools in Hackney were rebuilt or refurbished as part of the Building Schools for the Future (BSF) programme, after the Council secured £167 million in Government funding.

Through BSF, Hackney

has seen six schools completely renewed, and four new schools built from scratch. In addition, the Council built 19 new children's centres and five new youth centres.

And then, there was the introduction of academies. "We needed to create more school places and had to be brave," says Wood. Adding: "We said, we're not simply having academies forced on us, we're going to build the model ourselves."

That model involved all new schools signing up to an agreement that they would be 'non-selective, mixed and view themselves not as an island, but part of a community of schools.'

The establishment of the high-achieving Mossbourne Academy in 2004 is a fine example of this philosophy's success.

It's founding head teacher, Sir Michael Wilshaw, is also an illustration of the Trust's mission to recruit "the very best people," says Wood. Adding: "Getting someone of his calibre was a special moment, when we realised we were actually delivering on our promises."

In 2005, Wood took on responsibility for Hackney's children's social services, working as a Director for the Council as well as running the Trust. "Sometimes, the job involved doing difficult things," reflects Wood. "But the alternative was failing hundreds and hundreds of kids. We had to do it."

And do it, they did. In 2012, the Council took the running of education services back in house and the Trust became part of the local authority.

"It was time," says Wood, who still lives in London Fields and has also served as president of The Association of Directors of Children's Services.

Adding: "I was happy to move on to new things, because I knew there were great people in place, ready to do more amazing things. And they have."

Making Her Mark: 100 Years of Women's Activism in Hackney

Until 19 May, Hackney Museum, 1 Reading Lane, E8 1GQ

A NEW exhibition, charting the role of women's activism in the borough over the century, has opened at Hackney Museum.

'Making Her Mark: 100 Years of Women's Activism in Hackney' has been created in collaboration with the East End Women's Museum (EEWM). It examines how local women have brought about change in their community and wider society through political campaigns, industrial action, peaceful protest, direct action, and the arts. Sarah Jackson, co-founder of EEWM, said: "Hackney has a very rich history of women's activism across a huge range of issues and we're extremely proud to share these stories of women's courage, creativity, and determination in the borough."

DOES MY BOMB LOOK BIG IN THIS?

4 Mar, 7pm

A play about two young British Muslim best friends, exploring identity, prejudice, racism and radicalisation. Aisha and Yasmin are joined at the hip, BFFs from South West London. Reeling from Brexit, Trump and daily terror talk, Yasmin

PREVIEW*Hamlet*6-31 March, Hackney Empire, 291 Mare Street, E8 1EJ

"PART ghost story, part family tragedy, part dark comedy... an urgent and gripping thriller." That's how director Simon Godwin describes his radical reimagining of Hamlet for the Royal Shakespeare Company (RSC). And, indeed, it is a refreshingly modern production that ends its national tour at the Hackney Empire next month. Paapa Essiedu plays Hamlet, leading a predominantly black cast. Godwin says: "Paapa is British with Ghanaian heritage. When he and I talked about our production of Hamlet, I realised how radical it might be to see Denmark through the lens of a completely different culture, a culture that Paapa himself had experienced. "I began to imagine a Denmark re-conceived as a modern state influenced by the ritual, traditions and beauty of Ghana. So, our setting is full of the colour, emotional intensity and passion associated with that part of the world." The RSC's production of Hamlet is staged at the Hackney Empire from 6-31 March. Tickets range in price from £10 to £49.50. For more info, and to book, visit: hackneyempire.co.uk wants to reject the city she used to call home, before it completely cuts her, but Aisha thinks different. But when Yasmin suddenly disappears into the arms of ISIS, Aisha must decide whether there is any truth or hope in Yasmin's new-found world. Runners from the borough will be able to take advantage of discounts when they sign up for this year's Hackney Half Marathon Discounts? Not harf!

RESIDENTS can get up to a 50 per cent discount on entry to the Hackney Half Marathon on 20 May, which has had 17,000 people sign up so far.

The route takes runners past Hackney Downs, Hackney Empire, Broadway Market, Victoria Park and the London Stadium.

It's a half marathon like no other, with a buzzing route including bands and DJs at every mile, roaring crowds, and community spirit at every turn to carry participants to the finish line.

Once the hard work is done, there's time to chill, refuel, and celebrate with friends and family back at the Festival of Fitness on Hackney Marshes.

There will be live entertainment, music, activities and chill-out zones; and a Festival Village with local food and drink offering everything from mouth-watering vegan delights to dirty burgers, green juices and craft beer.

Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, said: "We are delighted to welcome the Virgin Sport Hackney Festival of Fitness and Half Marathon back to the borough again.

"The event is really made by the thousands of residents who take to the streets to cheer on the runners – they really spurred me on when I ran my first half marathon in 2017.

"I'm looking forward to running again in 2018 and hopefully shaving a few minutes off my time!"

Over £250,000 was raised for charities at the Hackney Half last year – including £7,000 for the Speaker of Hackney's charities.

This year the Speaker, Cllr Soraya Adejare, is encouraging residents to join her running team and raise even more money for her chosen charities. These include Skyway, a youth charity that encourages self-empowerment; Off Centre, a counselling, therapy, and advice service for young people aged between 11 and 25; and Access to Sports, a community-led sports development charity.

Have your say on prescribing over-the-counter items

RESIDENTS and patients in Hackney are invited to give their views on the NHS's proposal to stop giving out a list of routinely prescribed over-the-counter medicines. These prescriptions include items for a condition that is considered to be self-limiting and so does not need treatment as it will heal of its own accord; and conditions which lend themselves to self-care.

The list includes probiotics, vitamins and minerals, and treatments for minor ailments – such as coughs and colds, ulcers, haemorrhoids and conjunctivitis.

Last year, the NHS spent approximately £569 million on prescriptions for products that could otherwise be purchased over the counter. By reducing spends on such items, these resources can be put towards other priority areas that will have a greater impact for patients.

The NHS would like to hear from patients on this issue, especially those that may be affected by the proposals.

To take part in the consultation, which closes on 14 March, visit: www.engage.england.nhs.uk/consultation/over-the-counter-items-not-routinely-prescribed

Commitment to make Hackney a dementia friendly borough

THE Council has made a commitment to ensure that Hackney is a dementia friendly borough.

A motion was proposed on 24 January to work with the Hackney Dementia Action Alliance group, which will provide oversight of the work taking place to make the borough more dementia friendly.

Around 1,300 people in Hackney are living with dementia, and with an increasing and ageing population in the borough, the rate of dementia will increase along with demand for local dementia-friendly services.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Devolution, said: "Across Hackney there are many organisations offering support and doing lots of work in the effort to make the borough more dementia friendly.

"It is important that people can get information about getting involved in activities or groups to improve their mental health and wellbeing."

A Dementia Festival is set to take place across the borough from 21 to 27 May. For more info, or to get involved, e-mail: sandra.cater@alzheimers.org.uk; or call: 020 8533 0091.

TWO talented teen filmmakers from Stoke Newington have won prizes at a prestigious awards ceremony at the British Film Institute (BFI).

Now in its fourth year, the Moving Image Awards celebrate the UK's most talented student filmmakers and scriptwriters. Designed in partnership with the BFI, it aims to encourage more young people to consider a career in the film industry.

The competition is open to all those studying towards a film or media studies qualification with the examinations body WJEC Eduqas. Each year, students submit their work for consideration by a panel of judges, with awards for the best short film, best TV extract, best film extract, best music video, best screenplay and one overall winner.

At this month's ceremony Keisha Walters and Lauren Taylor were announced as winners of the Best Music Video category. The 17-year-old students from Stoke Newington School & Sixth Form made a video called Us Against Them for an original song written and performed by Nina Hudson, depicting a silent woman who seeks to rediscover her voice.

Keisha said: "We wanted to challenge stereotypes of women and show how women don't

The music video follows a woman who is given the voice she longs for by the artist who wrote the song, and is then able to share it with the rest of society.

Rebecca Ellis, Film Studies subject officer at WJEC Eduqas, said: "Each year we're astounded by the high standard of the entries to these awards.

"We received over 400 entries from 150 centres across the UK and the judges found it incredibly difficult to choose just one winner from each category.

"It's incredibly exciting to have the opportunity to showcase and reward work by such talented young people who have the potential to achieve great things within the film industry and beyond."

Learn to cycle with confidence

LOOKING to build confidence on two wheels? The Council is partnering with Cycle Confident to offer a range of free group training courses aimed at getting children and adults cycling more.

The courses, which are for young people aged five and upwards who want to learn to ride, and adults who also want to learn a bike or improve their on or off-road cycling skills, take place in Hackney Downs.

Children's Learn to Ride courses occur every Sunday until the end of March and are suitable for children who have either never ridden a bike or who would like to come off stabilisers.

Adult courses take place on the following dates:

- 10 March (9.30am-2pm: On-Road)
- 24 March (9.30am-11.30am: Learn to Ride, 12noon-2pm: Off-Road).

Adult bikes are available to borrow on a first-come-first-served basis. For more information, and to book a free place, visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/cycle-training; or call: 020 3031 6730.

Looking at Hackney Wick through young eyes

YOUNG people and local organisations joined Council members at Hackney Town Hall earlier this month to launch the report 'Hackney Wick Through Young Eyes'.

The report aims to give a platform to the concerns, thoughts and ideas of young people in order to create positive change in the borough.

Hackney Wick is the most deprived ward in the borough and over 26 per cent of those living there are aged under 19.

The report asked young people what they value, the problems they face, and the changes they want to see.

Researched by Hackney Quest and funded by The Wick Award through the National Lottery Big Local initiative, the report offers eight recommendations – from better employment opportunities to more community events within Hackney Wick.

Luke Billingham, 26, from Hackney Quest – and lead on the Hackney Wick Youth Voice project, said: "Having grown up in Hackney Wick myself, I'm keen to ensure that our recommendations are acted upon.

"We welcome any comments or feedback anyone may have on the report, or any ideas for addressing the issues it describes."

Read the report at: bit.do/hackneywickyv

Party like it's...

Help Hackney Archives identify partygoers who had their photographs taken by Ron Gibson's studio between 1952 and 1978

HACKNEY Archives has thousands of photographs of locals celebrating – whether it be a wedding, birthday, bar mitzvah, christening, retirement, or the office Christmas party.

These photos were all taken by Ron Gibson's studio, in Clapton, between 1952 and 1978 and are a fantastic part of Hackney's history.

Many, including those on this page, feature unknown people and locations, and the Archives staff would love to hear from anyone who recognises them.

Hackney Archives hopes to interview people who appear in the photographs, so that their stories can be preserved for the future.

Recipes straight from the ovens at Waterhouse

www.waterhouserestaurant.co.uk

THIS is the latest in a series of regular recipes courtesy of Waterhouse – a social enterprise restaurant alongside the Regent's Canal in Shoreditch. Cheese Spätzle is a classic German dish that is a great alternative to pasta.

Cheese Spätzle

Makes 5

Preparation time
10 mins

Cooking time
5 mins

Ingredients

- 500g plain flour
- 240ml milk
- 4 eggs + 2 extra egg yolks
- 60g butter, melted
- A pinch of nutmeg
- Salt and pepper
- Parsley, chopped.

Cheese mix

- 2 onions, finely chopped
- 2 cloves of garlic, finely chopped
- 300g Emmental cheese, grated
- 50g butter
- 1 tablespoon vegetable oil.

- Mix together the milk, eggs and yolks and 60g of butter in a bowl
- Add the flour and nutmeg; mix together
- While waiting for the water to boil, prepare the cheese mix in a frying pan. Heat the oil and gently fry the onions and garlic until golden brown. Add the butter and take off the heat
- Place a colander over the pot of boiling water and with a spoon, push the spätzle mix through the colander and cook for 5 minutes and take out with a strainer. Repeat this process in batches until the mixture is used up, being careful not to overfill the pot
- When all the spätzle are cooked, mix them with the previously fried onion and garlic. Melt the cheese into the mix in a pot on a low-medium heat
- Finish with the chopped parsley.

Method

- Put a pot of water on hob to boil, with a pinch of salt

Waterhouse - through Blue Marble Training - supports young people across the borough towards careers in the restaurant industry. Owned by Shoreditch Trust, income from this enterprise goes back into training programmes across the borough. Waterhouse in Orsman Road, N1, is open Mon to Fri 9am - 3pm. Have your say on engagement at Your Homes Festival

THE Council is working to improve its communication and engagement with Council tenants and leaseholders, and would like to hear from them through group discussions at Your Homes Festival.

These discussions will be on the local issues that matter to residents, and their preferences for being kept informed. The views shared will help the Council improve the way it engages with residents.

As a 'thank you' to anyone who gives up their time to attend, the Council is offering a £20 Love2Shop voucher. Places are limited and vouchers will only be provided to those who are selected to attend.

Your Homes Festival is set to take place on 14 March, at Hackney Town Hall, from 3-7pm.

To register your interest, sign up at: hackney.gov.uk/housing-get-involved Alternatively, register by calling: 020 8356 2467.

Group discussions will take place for Council tenants on estates with a TMO (Tenant Management Organisation), from 2-3pm; for leaseholders, from 3.30-4.30pm; and for Council tenants, from 5-6pm.

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by residents and serve for four years. The last borough-wide elections took place in May 2014. Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee Council services.

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map below.

MAYOR PHILIP GLANVILLE

Hackney's executive Mayor Philip Glanville was directly elected by the borough in 2016. He is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. The Mayor holds monthly casework surgeries in the Town Hall. To book an appointment, e-mail: mayor@hackney.gov.uk; or call: 020 8356 3269. Residents are first encouraged to contact their ward councillor. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney, who is chosen annually from the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Soraya Adejare.
